WHY DO YOU NEED US?

Davis Langdon's Access Consulting team are well versed to assist organisations in understanding their requirements under current disability legislation, inclusive of the DDA and assist in the implementation of procedures and policies to allow facilities and services to enable Universal Access for the broader community.

OHS regulation affects every workplace in Australia and is governed by a framework of acts, regulations, approved codes of practice and supporting industry guidance material.

In this arena, there has been increasing recognition about the importance of OHS, not only in the workplace but also in relation to safe designs of buildings and structures. In many States there are specific sections pertaining to designer responsibility which are now enforceable by law.

Davis Langdon has the skills to assist in formalising and implementing processes that will reduce the risks and enable those obligations to be met. We have recognised this as an important step towards providing a safer environment for people of all ages and abilities. Together with our extensive experience in the specialised field of access, we believe that we are in the unique position to provide our clients with a comprehensive suite of services to meet their requirements under the OHS Act as well as DDA.
